DONATIONS TO THE MUSEUM.

MONDAY, 10th February 1873.

BARRON GRAHAME, Esq., F.S.A. Scot., in the Chair.

After a Ballot, the following Gentlemen were duly elected Fellows:

WM. R. M'DIARMID, Esq., Whitehill, Dalbeattie.
JOHN SMALL, Esq., M.A., Librarian of the University, Edinburgh.
CHARLES RAMPINI, Esq., Advocate, 21 St Bernard's Crescent.
DAVID SEMPLE, Esq., Writer, Paisley.

The following Donations to the Museum and Library were laid on the table, and thanks voted to the Donors:

(1.) By the ROYAL HISTORICAL AND ARCHAEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION OF IRELAND, through their Secretary, Rev. JAMES GRAVES.

Specimens of Pottery from the Crannog of Ballydoo Lough, county Fermanagh, Ireland, comprising:

Portion of Pot-like Vessel, with ear, being part of the rim and bulging side of a vessel of coarse, dark-coloured, hard-baked clay. The thickness of the vessel at the brim is about half-an-inch, the top of the brim is flattened and surmounted with obliquely impressed rows of markings with a square-ended punch applied while the clay was soft. Below the rim, on the upper part of the globular bulge of the pot, is a chevron pattern formed of rows of impressed markings similar to those on the rim. (See figure 1.)

The mode of ornamentation presents some resemblance to that on silver articles in the Cuerdale hoard, dating somewhere about the 9th century; but, on the other hand, it is not very unlike that of the early sepulchral urns usually found associated with weapons of stone. Mr

Albert Way, to whom some of this pottery was submitted, says in a note to Mr Wakeman:—

"Your samples seem to come nearest to our Anglo-Saxon, which is, of course, black or dingy brown paste, full of small grit or particles of stone, to give some greater consistence to the ill-compacted clay. There certainly appears to me to be some resemblance, though not identity, between your ware and the vessels found so abundantly with us; but your forms are much better, the contour more graceful. The two wares are perfectly distinct, although there may be some indications that might suggest the idea that the two are not far apart as regards period. The little ears are also peculiar. The impressed ornament is not of the earliest period with us. I should not, however, ascribe these remarkable wares to a very early age; for instance, to that in which the use of bronze was prevalent. I have sought in vain for data on which to ground any reliable opinion as to the date of this very curious pottery."

Portion of the Lip of a Vessel, which in the texture of the clay, and also in its style and shape of ornament, somewhat resembles the Lewis craggans, described and figured in the Proceedings, vol. ix. p. 205, except that the ornamentation is bolder and more regular, consisting of short oblique lines drawn deeply in the soft clay with some pointed instrument.

Portion of a similar Vessel like the pot first mentioned, ornamented, but much smaller.

Three Fragments of the Side and part of the Bottom of three plain Vessels, not differing greatly in colour and texture of clay from the others.

A Description, with plans, of the Crannog of Ballydoo Lough, from which these relics came, is given by Mr W. F. Wakeman in the Journal of the Royal Historical and Archaeological Association of Ireland for 1871, vol. i., 4th series, p. 360.

(2.) By Rev. JOHN SOUTAR, Inverkeithing, through ANDREW JERVIS, Esq., F.S.A. Scot.

(3.) By Dr G. FITZJAMES COLEBURN, Newark, New Jersey.
