NOTICE OF THE CEILING OF THE "PAINTED GALLERY" AT PINKIE HOUSE. BY GEORGE SETON, M.A., F.S.A. SCOT.

The following is the description of the Gallery in Billings' Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Scotland:— "By far the most interesting apartment is the Painted Gallery. It is an arched room, 120 feet long, lighted at the end by an oriel window. The wooden roof is entirely covered with paintings and inscriptions. The former is in part purely decorative, but there are a number of groups, or scenes, round which frames are painted, with cords and nails, so that they represent hanging pictures. Many of them embody incidents to which a moral is attached, and the subjects are usually classical; they have a general analogy to the scenes represented on old Dutch tiles. The drawing is coarse, but powerful and full of character, and the colours are remarkably fresh and clean. The learned lawyer to whom Pinkie owes its glory seems to have had a passion for Latin inscriptions. They occur in many parts of the stone-work, and the Painted Gallery is thickly strewed with them. They are moral apothegms, some of them inculcating a special modesty in reference to the vanity of magnificent houses, which sounds rather oddly in the midst of so much architectural magnificence, and seems to import that their author was conscious that his besetting weakness lay in that direction. The painting of this chamber had evidently been continued from the ceiling along the walls, and it is to be regretted that these have been modernised . . . . The painted chamber is a very suitable place for spectral horrors. A grim forbidding portrait of a female, whose name is associated with a traditional crime, is said to come forth in shadowy embodiment, and stalk through its gloomy length by night.

It is generally believed that the principal portion of Pinkie House, including the "King's Room" and "Painted Gallery," owes its existence to Lord Dunfermline, who was also the builder of the still grander structure of Fyvie Castle, in Aberdeenshire. The family chronicle informs us that "he acquired the lands of Pinkie, where he built ane noble house, brave stone dykes about the garden and orchard, with other commendable policie about it"; and the following inscription, although unfortunately no longer visible, in consequence of modern additions, is cut upon the front of the mansion:—"Dominus Alexander Setonius hanc domum ædificavit, non ad animi, sed fortunarum et agelli modum, 1613."

The length of the "Painted Gallery" given by Billings, on the authority of the New Statistical Account of Scotland, is considerably overstated, as it is only about 86 (instead of 120) feet in length; the breadth being not quite 20 feet; and the height 13 feet 7 inches. During a recent visit to Sir John Hope, I spent several hours in carefully copying the blazons, mottoes, and legends on the ceiling, in so far as they are still decipherable, with the following result. The ceiling may be conveniently described under three divisions:

1 Lord Kingston's continuation of Sir Richard Maitland's House of Seytoun, p. 64.
2 The celebrated gallery at Hardwick, in the county of Nottingham, is 180 feet long, and of a proportionate breadth.
3 The following note occurs at the end of a MS. Copy of the Chronicle and Historie of the Hous and Surname of Setoun, bearing the initials of Sir Thomas Hope, Lord Advocate, in the possession of Sir John Hope:—"This Book was given by the old Earle of Wintoun to Sir Thomas Hope of Craighall, the King's Advocate, and his Matles Commissioner at that time, about the year of God 1628. The reason for which the Earle gave it was, because the said Sir Thomas his Lady D. Elizabeth Bennet was ane oye of the House of Wintoun, for hir mother, callit Grissell Seton, was a brother's daughter of the House. Her father lived in Tranent."

First or Central Compartment.

In this compartment the arms of the Earl of Dunfermline

1 Alexander Seton, third surviving son of George, 7th Lord Seton; born 1555; called to the Scottish Bar, c. 1577; Extraordinary Lord of Session (Prior of Pluscardine), 1586; Ordinary Lord (Lord Urquhart), 1588; Lord President, 1593; Lord Fyvie, 1597; Chancellor of Scotland, 1604; Earl of Dunfermline, 1605. Died 1622. Married, 1st, c. 1592, Lilias Drummond, second daughter of Patrick, 3rd Lord Drummond, and sister of James, 1st Earl of Perth; 2nd, c. 1601, Grizel Leslie, fourth daughter of James, Master of Rothes, and sister of John, 6th Earl of Rothes; 3rd, c. 1607, Margaret Hay, daughter of James, 7th Lord Yester, and sister of John, 1st Earl of Tweeddale.

Accordingly, the Earl of Winton on the one side, and the coat of the Earl of Angus on the other; while, in the two side borders, the shield of the Earl of Bothwell occurs between the escutcheons of Lord Yester and Ferquhard of Gilmulscroft, and that of the Earl of Cassilis between the coats of
CEILING OF THE PAINTED GALLERY AT PINKIE HOUSE.

Lord Borthwick and the Marquis of Hamilton, the latter of which is now almost entirely effaced. The following are the blazons of these nine armorial coats:

1. "The Earle of Dunfermline."—Quarterly, 1st and 4th or, three crescents within a double tressure, flowered and counterflowered gules, for Seton. 2nd and 3rd argent, on a fess gules, three cinquefoils of the first, for Hamilton. Supporters, two horses at liberty argent. Crest, over a coronet, a crescent gules. Motto, Semper. Under the shield, in a ribbon, "A. E. D." (Alexander, Earl of Dunfermline).

2. "The Earle of Winton."—Quarterly, 1st and 4th as in No. 1. 2nd and 3rd azure, three garbs or, for the Earldom of Buchan. Surtout, azure, a blazing star of twelve points argent, within a double tressure flowered and counter-flowered or, for the title of Winton. Supporters, two foxes proper, collared or, with chains attached to the collars, passing between the forelegs, and reflexing over the backs. Crest, over a coronet, a dragon vert, spouting fire proper, with wings elevated, and charged with a star argent. Motto, Hazard yit fordward.

3. "The Lorde Yester."—Quarterly, 1st and 4th azure, three cinquefoils argent, for Fraser. 2nd and 3rd gules, three bars ermine, for Gifford of Yester. Surtout, argent, three inescutcheons azure (usually gules), the paternal coat of Hay. (The 1st and 2nd quarters, the upper portion of the coat surtout, and the crest and motto are quite effaced.) Supporters, two stags.

4. "The Earle of Cassilis."—Argent, a chevron gules between three cross-crosslets fitched sable, all within a double tressure flowered and counterflowered of the second. Supporters, two swans proper. Crest, over a coronet, a dolphin azure. Motto, Avise la fine (sic).

5. "The Earle of Bothwell."—Quarterly, 1st and 4th or, a bend azure, for Vass, Lord Dirleton. 2nd and 3rd gules, on a chevron argent, two lions pulling at a rose of the first, for Hepburn. Surtout, the arms of Scotland. Supporters, two lions guardant gules. Crest, over a coronet, and in front of a tree (?) vert, a horse argent, caparisoned gules. Motto, in ribbon over crest, illegible—(probably, "Keip traist").

In the admirable coloured plate of the arms of "the Lordis of Liddisdail of auld," in Mr Armstrong's History of Liddesdale, &c., two coats are given for the Earl of Bothwell, of which the second corresponds with the Pinkie blazon; while in the first there is no shield surtout. Patrick, first Earl of Bothwell, received a grant of the Lordship of Liddesdale in 1491–2, and perhaps he carried the Royal arms on an inescutcheon, on account of his official position as High Admiral of the Kingdom.

6. "Ferquhard of Gilmotscroft."—Quarterly, 1st or, a lion rampant gules. 2nd, argent, three sinister hands couped paleways gules. 3rd, argent, a lymphad sable with flag of the second. 4th or, a chevron chequy argent and sable between three water-bougets of the second. Crest, over a helmet, a dexter hand gules, couped as the former. Motto, A tovt. Nisbet (Heraldry, i. 278) gives the following as the arms of Robert Farquhar of Gilmotscroft:—Argent, a lion rampant sable, armed and langued or, between three sinister hands, two and one, couped paleways gules. Crest, as on the ceiling. Motto, Sto, cado, fide et armis.

7. "The Lorde Borthwick."—Argent, three cinquefoils sable. Supporters, two angels proper, winged or. Crest, on a wreath (no coronet), a savage's head couped proper (?). Motto, Qui conduit.

8. "The Earle of Angus."—Quarterly, 1st azure, a lion rampant argent, for the Earldom of Galloway. 2nd or, a lion rampant gules, surmounted of a ribbon sable, for the Lordship of Abernethy. 3rd argent, three piles azure, for Wishart of Brechin. 4th or, a fess chequy argent and azure, surmounted of a bend sable, charged with three buckles of the second, for Stewart of Bonkill. Surtout, argent, a man's heart gules ensigned with an imperial crown proper, and on a chief azure, three stars of the first, the paternal coat of Douglas. Supporters, dexter, a savage proper holding a baton erected and wreathed about the middle with laurel vert; sinister, a stag proper (armed and unguled or ?). Crest, over a coronet (chapeau gules, turned up ermine ?), a salamander vert, in the middle of flames of fire. Motto, Jamais arriere. The achievement is placed within a pale of wood, wreathed and impaled, by way of "compartment."

1 Elder Brother of Gavin Douglas the Poet, Bishop of Dunkeld.
This blazon corresponds with the seals of the eighth and ninth Earls of Angus, as given in Laing's Catalogue, Nos. 253-4. In Mr Armstrong's plate (supra, p. 13), on the other hand, the field of Galloway in the first quarter is gules instead of azure; while Soulis—ermine, three chevronels gules—takes the place of Wishart of Brechin in the third quarter.

9. "The Marquess of Hamilton."—With the exception of a coronet below the remains of the crest (probably an oak tree and frame-saw) and the horns of the supporters (two stags or antelopes), this achievement is entirely effaced. In the lower portion of the shield, there are faint traces of cinquefoils, and probably the blazon embraced three of these charges, which constitute the paternal coat of Hamilton. It seems strange that the arms of the head of the family should have been introduced in lieu of those of the Chancellor's maternal grandfather, Sir William Hamilton of Sorn and Sanquhar, who bore gules, three cinquefoils, ermine, within a double tressure, flowered and counterflowered or, as illuminated, according to Nisbet, on the house of Seton. In a marginal note, by the late Mr Stodart, on one of the volumes of Paterson's Ayrshire Families in the Lyon Office, it is stated that Sir William Hamilton was allowed the double tressure in 1539.

The following four symbolical devices and relative mottoes in the central compartment are placed within oval figures:

1. An old man surrounded by barrels. Dives . inops . ratio . Anticyram destruit . . . . . \( ? \).

The last word in this legend (of which the last letter is "m") is nearly effaced, and, as it stands, the translation is somewhat doubtful. Anticyra was a town in Phocis celebrated for its hellebore, which was of great medicinal value.

2. Two men holding goats in their arms. A . teneris . adsuesce . labori (Accustom yourself to labour from your earliest years).

3. A white stag. Serviat . aternum . qui . parvo . nesciet . uti (May he be ever dependent who knows not how to put up with limited means).

The four principal legends are placed within oblong panels:
5. Natura necessaria, docuit. quæ sunt, paucæ et parabília. Sulmultia superflua, excogitavit. quæ sunt, innumera, et difficilia (Nature has taught us what things are necessary, which are both few and easily attained. Folly has devised superfluities, which are countless, and difficult to be acquired).

6. In magna fortuna ut admodum difficile, sic admodum pulchrum est, seipsum continere (In great prosperity as it is very difficult, so it is very beautiful to exhibit moderation).

7. Ad Æta et aspera, pariter nati, sumus nisi pari utraque animo, sumus (Philocles was an admiral of the Athenian fleet during the Peloponnesian war, who recommended his countrymen to cut off the right hands of their captured enemies, that they might be rendered unfit for service.

The four border legends, in small oblong panels, are as follows:—

9. Virum, bonum, non, ordo sed mores præstant (Not rank but demeanour demonstrates the good man).

10. Hominem. esse. non. qui. injuriarum. non. obliviscitur ().

11. Utile est ad usum secundorum per adversa venisse (It is useful to have reached good fortune through adversity).

12. æquora. ventis. turbantur. Populum. oratores. movent (The seas are agitated by the winds—Orators move the populace).

Second or Entrance Compartment.

The six symbolical devices and relative mottoes in this compartment are placed within heater-shaped shields, and may be briefly described as follows:—

13. A female figure with bandaged eyes, and a dark-complexioned dwarf at her feet. Fortuna non mutat genus (Fortuna does not change our race).

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SOCIETY, DECEMBER 12, 1887.

innumeris, moribus, aptus, erit (The wise man will adapt himself to countless fashions).

15. A mailed figure carrying an old man on his back. Sat, patriae, Priamoque, datum (Enough has been rendered to our country and to Priam).

16. Two individuals in affectionate embrace, and two others looking on. Nil, ego, contulerim, jucundo, sanus, amico (When in sound health, I would prefer nothing to a pleasant friend).

17. Two figures accompanied by a number of dogs. Firma, amicitia (Friendship is firm).

18. A lion with neck encircled by a snake. Quam, bene, conveniunt (How well they agree).

The two principal legends are placed within smaller shields of a somewhat similar shape to those which embrace the symbolical devices, and are as follows:—

19. Vir, bonus, patriam, amat, non, quia, dives, aut, opulenta, sed, quia, sua. Sic, Ulysses, ad, Ithace, saxa, non, minori, studio, contendit, quam, Agamemnon, ad, nobiles, Mycænarum, muros (A good man loves his country not because it is rich or opulent, but because it is his own. Thus did Ulysses hasten to the rocks of Ithaca with no less zeal than Agamemnon to the mighty walls of Myceene).

20. Curandum, magis, ut, Isete, quam, ut, late, habitemus. Scepe, in, palatiis, labor, et, dolor, in, tuguriis, quies, et, gaudium, habitant (We should take care rather to have happy than extensive abodes. In palaces, labour and sorrow, in cottages, peace and joy, often dwell).

Of the ten border legends, two on each side (21, 22, 23, and 24) are placed within small oblong panels, and are all effaced; while the six others occupy semicircular figures, and are as follows:—

25. Bona, mens, omnibus, patet. Omnes, ad, hoc, nobiles, sumus (A good mind is open to all. To this extent we are all noble).

26. Vita, nostra, temperanda, inter, bonos, mores, et, publicos (?

27. Cuique, suum, rependit, posteritas, decus (Posterity renders to every man the honour that is his due).
CEILING OF THE PAINTED GALLERY AT PINKIE HOUSE. 19

28. Nemo . regere . potest . nisi . qui . et . regi (No one can govern unless he can also be governed).
29. Bene . ferre . magnum . disce . fortunam¹ (Learn to bear great prosperity with moderation).
30. Vis . expers . consilii . mole . ruit . sua (Power without guidance falls by its own weight).

Third or Oriel Window Compartment.

The devices and legends in this compartment are arranged in precisely the same manner as those in the entrance compartment. The six devices and relative mottoes are:

31. A satyr and other figures dancing in front of a circular tower. Nympharumque . leves . cum . satyris . chori . secernunt . me . populo (The graceful gambols of nymphs and satyrs distinguish me from the common herd).
32. Three individuals standing beside a king seated on his throne. Pax . optima . rerura (Peace is the best of things).
33. A man drawing water from a fountain, and another figure floating down a stream. Nihil . amplius . opto (I wish nothing more).
34. Two females in a small boat—one sitting in the stern, the other (naked) standing and holding a sail. Sit . virtus . Tiphys (Let virtue be the pilot).

Tiphys was the pilot of the ship of the Argonauts.
35. A gouty man on a couch, with an attendant standing beside him. Semper avarus eget (The covetous man is always in need).
36. Two warriors in front of a figure, seated on a pedestal, and holding a cornucopia. Nullum . numen . abest . si . sit . prudentia (No divine aid is wanting if prudence is displayed).

The two principal legends are—

37. Placeat . homini . quicquid . Deo . placuit . ratio . quam . qui . amat . contra . durissima . armatus . est (Let whatever be the will of God be that of man, a rule which he who loves is armed against the hardest calamities).

38. Regiae amplissimæque opes si in malum et improvidum inciderint momento dissipantur at quamvis modiæ bono custodi traditæ usu ipsæ crescunt et augentur (If princely and extensive possessions fall to the lot of a wicked and improvident master, they are straightway dissipated, but riches, however moderate, if bestowed upon a good keeper, grow by their use and are increased).

As in the case of the entrance compartment, four of the ten border legends, two on each side (39, 40, 41, and 42), are effaced, the six others being as follows:—

43. Dignum laude virum musa vetat mori (The muse forbids that the man worthy of laudation should die).

44. Pax una triumphis innumeris potior (One peace is better than innumerable triumphs).

45. Bene est cui Deus obtulit parca quod satis est manu (Well is it for him on whom God with a frugal hand has conferred enough).

46. Cuique mores fortunam singunt sui (A man's character determines his fortune).

47. Scilicet improba crescunt tamen curtae nescio quid semper abest rei (Ill-gotten riches forsooth increase, I yet know not what it is that is ever wanting in a straitened fortune).

48. Sũpe acri potior prudentia dextra (Prudence is often better than a strong right arm).

Since I copied the legends, Sir John Hope has kindly sent me a "List of the Inscriptions," made by a friend of the family about thirty years ago, and embracing 29 of the 48 legends and mottoes, besides two others in Greek characters, on the ceiling of the oriel window, which I had unaccountably overlooked. The Greek legends are as follows:—

1 Like No. 32, worthy of the Chancellor of James VI., whose motto was "Beati pacifici."

2 One of the prayers or proverbs attributed to another Alexander Seton—the 6th Earl of Eglinton, better known as "Greysteel"—was as follows:—"God send us some money, for they are little thought of that want it." (Kelly's Scottish Proverbs, 113.)
49. MH . ΠΑΝΝΥΧΙΟΝ (Not the whole night).

50. ΟΥ . ΧΡΗ . ΠΑΝΝΥΧΙΟΝ . ΕΥΔΕΙΝ . ΒΟΥΛΑΝΦΟΡΟΝ . ΑΝΔΡΑ
(A counsellor ought not to sleep the whole night).

In a few instances, the transcriber has misread some of the words; but, speaking generally, the transcripts correspond with my own copies. The centre of the oriel ceiling is occupied by a stork standing on one leg, surmounted by a ribbon bearing the first of the two Greek inscriptions, while the other is below, on another ribbon arranged in three divisions.
Besides two fleurs-de-lis and other ornaments, the panel exhibits a cinquefoil within a red crescent (a favourite device of Chancellor Seton's), and his initials, combined with those of his third wife, Margaret Hay, under a coronet, as on more than one of the bedroom ceilings at Pinkie.

The following inscriptions, in Roman characters, appear on two slabs, each about 3 x 4 feet, which lay detached at Pinkie for many years, and were built into the garden wall, by Sir John Hope, in 1884, under the coronet and monogram (A. S. and M. H.) of the Earl and Countess of Dunfermline:—Sibi . posteris . bonis . omnibus . humanis .
urbanisque . hominibus . urbanitas . omnis . humanitatisque . aman-aedificia . fundavit . extruxit . ornavit . nihil . hic . hostile . ne . arcendis .
quidem . hostibus . non . fossa . non . vallum . verum . ad . hospites .
benigne . excipiendos . benevole . tractandos . fons . aquae . virginis .
viridaria . piscinae . avaria . amenitatem . omnia . ad . cordem .
amunumque . honeste . oblectandum . composuit . quisquis . . . . . . hae . furto . ferro . flamma . . . . . . quo . . . . . . hostiliter . se .
gesserit . esse . omnis . caritatis . urbanitas . expetet . immo .

ΕΥΧΑΡΙΣΤΙΑ .

At Earls Hall, near Leuchars, long the property of the Bruce family, and at Collairnie Castle, in the parish of Dunbog, both in the county of Fife, are painted ceilings, but on a much smaller scale than that of the Pinkie Gallery. The Earlshall ceiling is covered with the arms of various monarchs and of several of the Scottish nobility, painted entirely in black, and said to have been the work of a French artist; while a number of quaint maxims appear on one of the walls. A good many years ago, I visited the ruinous castle of Collairnie, for centuries the property of the Barclays, and made a few notes respecting the shields of arms on one of the ceilings; but these have unfortunately been mislaid. I have reason to believe, however, that careful copies of the escutcheons are in the possession of the representatives of the late Mr Thomas Barclay, Sheriff Clerk of Fifeshire.

About twenty years ago, two very interesting painted ceilings, exhibiting upwards of forty coats of Scottish noblemen (c. 1570), were discovered behind coatings of plaster in an old house on the south side of the High Street, Linlithgow. Unfortunately, they were allowed to be broken up, and most of the escutcheons were acquired by the representatives of the families to whom they pertained; but a detailed account of the ceilings, with lithographed illustrations, will be found in the seventh volume of the Society's Proceedings. As at Pinkie, Earlshall, and Collairnie, the designs were executed in water-colour "tempera," without any traces of gilding.
