

7. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The archaeological works at Jedburgh Abbey Rampart were possible due to funding from the Jedburgh Conservation Area Regeneration Scheme and Scottish Borders Council. Excavation work was possible thanks to support and permissions from Scottish Borders Council and Historic Environment Scotland, in particular Paul Frankland, Iain Williams, Ian Dixon, and Keith Elliott at SBC, and Deirdre Cameron at HES. The project was overseen by HARP's team of archaeologists – Ian Hill, Michelle Gamble, Kieran Manchip, and Samira Hill. Two talks on the results of the excavation works were organised and hosted by Colin Gilmour (Jedburgh CARS) and the Scottish Historic Buildings Trust. The findings were also included in an Edinburgh, Lothian and Borders Archaeology Conference talk in 2021. Thanks also go to Will Murray of the Scottish Conservation Studio, for conservation of the metal finds and general advice and guidance for metal artefacts.
