

4. Notice by A. SETON, Esq. of Tumuli which were discovered at Bowerhouses near Dunbar, in a letter communicated to the Secretary.

The accompanying remains, said to have been taken from a tumulus, consist of copper implements (the weapons usually named celts) and apparently plates of copper armour. They were found in two urns, one of which was of considerable dimensions, being near a foot and a half in height; the other was of small size. Burnt bones, portions of skulls, charcoal, &c. were mixed with them. These relics were discovered during the course of levelling some ground at Bowerhouses near Dunbar. I have not seen the place. The foundations of forts or buildings are said to have been traced there. Stone coffins have likewise been dug up, along with whet-stones, a drinking cup, &c.
